The Buying Decision Starts and Ends with the Building Owner. They own the process.

STEPS OF THE BUYING PROCESS

1. The owner recognizes a need for a renovation project or new construction. Based on experience and buying influences, the owner has established a preferred vendor list (PVL) for his buildings.

2. The owner submits his project objectives to the designer, who draws up plans that incorporate the owner's PVL as well as the designer's short list of brand recommendations.

3. The owner submits the designer's plan to the contractor, who seeks bids from suppliers (manufacturers, distributors, dealers). The contractor submits the final project bid to the owner for final approval.

The BUILDINGS Brand Report

Did you know BUILDINGS is one of only two publications to offer a fully integrated BPA Brand Report, the other being our sister publication, interiors+sources.

Among 1,700+ members worldwide, and over 450 members reporting multiple channel data, no other BPA member can make this claim.

Not all BRAND reports are the same.

THE BPA BRAND REPORT was designed to present the entire scope of a brand – and give marketers a better look at a brand’s total recipient base across multiple platforms.

With our integrated database, we can report a total net-unique, unduplicated number of individuals who engage with multiple channels of our brand. You know exactly who your advertising is reaching and through which channel.

Average number of “touch points/channels” per net unique individual. You can see, at a glance, who is looking at what and where, without the mystery of guessing. Cross-tabulated reporting showing media channel interaction. Media buyers want to know about multi-channel marketing, and this report is the ONLY one that does that for you!

Total unique individuals by integrated channel. No more guess work or wondering if your target is here or there. The integrated audit will help you see what’s really going on.

Eliminates duplication between channels. Now, for the first time, you can eliminate waste for real.

In addition, BUILDINGS goes one step further by providing information on the type and quantity of buildings for which our audience is responsible.

No other B2B publication brings you this type of data – or has it audited to prove its value. We view the Brand Report as an investment in your knowledge and confidence of our audience!
